

Sources of learning

Most of what we learn passes unnoticed.

Learning is like an onion skin – our development consists of tiny layers of seemingly insignificant experiences that over time build into something solid.

So, what are the sources of your development?

From what are you learning every day, probably without realising that you are adding to your knowledge and abilities?

With your small group, come up with a list of learning sources, and we will then share thoughts in the main group.
